Gain in-depth experience with Straw Bale construction and finish work in this comprehensive hands-on building workshop to be held on the site of our client's project in the City of Pendleton. This particular workshop has been developed especially for building professionals such as contractors, architects, engineers, and building officials. We will cover all phases of Straw Bale construction and teach you the specifics required to engage this method of construction as a viable trade. Theory, design, codes, site issues, foundation, and moisture mitigation will be addressed in presentation, demonstration, discussion, and application. The week will provide plenty of opportunity for participants to build bale walls, create detail elements, prepare walls for finishes, and apply the first coat of stucco.

Price includes a five (5) day workshop of hands-on training and information, a packet of information and resources for future reference, and an in-depth presentation on the history of straw bale construction. Registration is limited to 25 participants. Upon receipt of registration and deposit/payment, we will send you directions and additional information.
